MEMORIAL AT THE PORT OF PORTSMOUTH

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART ONE. 1914.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1914, who have no other grave than the sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in subsequent years will be recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1914, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The Naval forces of the Empire were engaged during the whole of the War in the task of destroying the German Navy or confining it to its bases, in order to secure the safety of British transports and merchant ships and to paralyse enemy sea-borne trade. They engaged also from time to time in operations against enemy positions or forces on land, as in the Dardanelles in February and March, 1915; and on them depended the concentration of our land forces in the various theatres of war.

The Navies went to war on the 4th August, and began to clear the seas of enemy war vessels and shipping.

On the 6th, the light cruiser "Amphion" was sunk by a mine in the North Sea.

Between the 9th and the 16th August the greater part of the Expeditionary Force was taken to France without loss under the protection of the Channel Fleet; and during August and September the Indian Expeditionary Force "A" was transported from India to France.

On the 26th August H.M.S. "Highflyer" sank the German armed merchant cruiser "Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse" off the Spanish coast.

On the 28th August the action off Heligoland was fought. The light cruiser "Arethusa" was damaged; the German fleet lost three light cruisers and one destroyer.

On the 5th September the light cruiser "Pathfinder" was sunk by an enemy submarine off St. Abb's Head.

On the 14th September the armed merchant cruiser "Carmania" sank the German armed merchant cruiser "Cap Trafalgar" in the South Atlantic.

On the 20th September the light cruiser "Pegasus" was sunk by the German light cruiser "Königsberg" off Zanzibar.

On the 22nd September the cruisers " Aboukir," " Cressy " and " Hogue," manned chiefly by Reservists, were sunk by an enemy submarine in the North Sea ; and 149 out of the 1437 Officers and Men whose bodies were not recovered and identified belonged to the Port of Portsmouth. The bodies of about 40 men belonging to these three ships were washed up on the Dutch coast and are buried in Holland.

In October, after the fall of Antwerp and the German occupation of Ostend the Navy assisted in checking the German advance along the Belgian coast, and supporting the left flank of the Allied Armies, by an intense bombardment of the coast between Ostend and Nieuport. The bombarding squadron suffered few casualties.

On the 15th October the cruiser " Hawke " went down in the North Sea, torpedoed by an enemy submarine, with 526 men, of whom 56 belonged to the Port of Portsmouth.

On the 16th October the New Zealand Expeditionary Force, and on the 17th the Australian Imperial Force, began their voyage to France.

On the 27th October the battleship " Audacious " was sunk by a mine off Tory Island. The whole of the crew was saved.

The Battle of Coronel (named from a small town on the coast of Chile) was fought on the 1st November. The cruisers " Good Hope " and " Monmouth " were sunk by Vice-Admiral Graf von Spee's squadron ; " Glasgow," " Otranto " and " Canopus " escaped. Of the 891 names from " Good Hope " appearing on the three Naval Memorials, 827 (including that of Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock) are in this Portsmouth Register.

The British submarine " B11 " entered the Dardanelles on the 6th November ; and on the 13th December she destroyed the Turkish battleship " Messoudieh."

On the 9th November H.M.A.S. " Sydney " sank the German light cruiser " Emden " off the Cocos Islands.

On the 20th November the battleship " Bulwark " was blown up by an internal explosion off Sheerness. The Naval Memorials contain the names of 711 dead of this disaster, 697 of whom are commemorated at Portsmouth.

The last important engagement of the year was the Battle of the Falkland Islands, fought on the 8th December in the seas South-East of that group of islands. It resulted in the destruction (without the loss of a British ship) of four out of five cruisers in Admiral von Spee's squadron.

The Register of the Portsmouth Memorial (1914) records particulars of the loss of 1,917 ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy, 1,524 of whom fell in H.M.S. " Good Hope " and " Bulwark."

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART TWO. 1915.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1915, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the Great War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1915, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

By January, 1915, the Navies of the Empire had secured the general command of the sea. Enemy war vessels had, with very few exceptions, disappeared from open waters; but German mine-layers and submarines were extending their range, and the Navies, reinforced by the trawlers, drifters and yachts of the Auxiliary Patrol, were kept active. The German possessions in the Pacific had fallen; but in Africa three groups of German colonies were invested by our Naval and Military forces. The constant stream of reinforcements from Great Britain and the Dominions to the theatres of war had to be transported and convoyed. Lastly, the Royal Navy undertook during the year 1915 certain direct attacks on enemy land forces and positions, of which far the most important was the attack on the Dardanelles forts in February and March.

In the early morning of the 1st January the battleship " Formidable " was sunk by a submarine in the English Channel. The names of 529 out of a complement of 780 appear on the Naval Memorials, and of these 20 are on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 13th January the armed merchant cruiser " Viknor " was lost off the Irish coast. The names of 153 ranks and ratings from this vessel appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 24th January a German fleet, intended to clear the Dogger Bank of British vessels, was caught and pursued. The Action of the Dogger Bank resulted in the destruction of the German cruiser " Blücher " ; the battle cruiser " Lion " was damaged but brought back to Rosyth, and the British casualties were light.

. On the 3rd February the armed merchant cruiser " Clan MacNaughton " foundered in the North Atlantic. Of 255 ranks and ratings who went down, the names of 10 are on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 4th February the German Admiralty declared the waters round the British Isles a war zone, in which neutral vessels would navigate at their peril. The threat was carried out chiefly by the German submarines. Against them, nets were laid at important points across the North Channel in February, and across the Straits of Dover a month later ; and on the 4th March the German submarine " U8," caught in an indicator net in the Channel, was destroyed.

On the 11th March the armed merchant cruiser " Bayano " was sunk by a submarine off the Clyde ; and the names of 94 ranks and ratings from this vessel appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 14th March the German light cruiser " Dresden," a survivor of the Battle of the Falkland Islands, was found and sunk by the light cruiser " Glasgow " at Juan Fernandez, a Chilean island North-West from Coronel.

In April the last of the original German raiders, " Kronprinz Wilhelm," took refuge at Newport News, on the coast of the United States, and was interned.

On the 7th May the German submarine " U20 " sank the steamship " Lusitania " off the Old Head of Kinsale, and 1,198 out of nearly 2,000 passengers and crew perished.

On the 23rd May Italy declared war on Austria-Hungary. On the 27th a British battle squadron joined the Italian fleet in the Adriatic and it was followed shortly after by a light cruiser squadron.

On the 27th May the mine-layer " Princess Irene " was destroyed by an internal explosion in harbour at Sheerness. The bodies of 313 men, of whom 127 belonged to the Port of Portsmouth, were not recovered.

On the 8th August the armed merchant cruiser " India " was sunk by a German submarine off the Norwegian coast.

On the 9th August the destroyer " Lynx " was sunk by a mine off the Moray Firth. Of 62 names on the Naval Memorials belonging to this vessel, 58 appear at Portsmouth.

On the 13th August the hired transport " Royal Edward," carrying drafts for Egypt, was sunk by a German submarine in the Ægean with considerable loss of life.

On the 19th August the " Q " ship " Baralong " destroyed the German submarine " U27." (The " Q " ships were small merchant vessels armed with concealed guns.)

On the 15th October the British Government proclaimed a state of war with Bulgaria. The following day the Entente Governments proclaimed a blockade of the Ægean coast of Bulgaria and on the 21st an Allied squadron bombarded Dedeagatch.

On the 23rd October the submarine " E18 " sank the German cruiser " Prinz Adalbert " in the Baltic.

On the 28th October the cruiser " Argyll " was wrecked on the Bell Rock, near Dundee. The whole of the crew was saved.

On the 6th November one Egyptian coastguard cruiser was sunk and one disabled by a German submarine at Sollum.

On the 7th November and the 17th December two German light cruisers, " Undine " and " Bremen," were sunk by British submarines in the Baltic.

On the 30th December the cruiser " Natal " was destroyed by an internal explosion in harbour in Cromarty Firth. The names of 392 officers and men who perished in this disaster appear on the three Naval Memorials, and of these 61 are in this Portsmouth Register.

2. Operations against German Colonies.

On the 12th January Mafia Island, off the mouth of the Rufigi (German East Africa), was seized by British forces ; and on the 11th July British monitors destroyed the German light cruiser " Königsberg " in the same river.

On the 1st March the British blockade of German East Africa was begun. On the 26th December the small German gunboat " Kingani " was captured on Lake Tanganyika by two motor boats transported from Capetown.

On the 23rd April the British blockade of the Cameroons was begun.

The British Naval operations against Turkey in 1915 included actions at sea, direct attacks on shore positions, and the landing, supply and withdrawal of the Military forces which fought on the Peninsula. They form, however, an almost continuous campaign, and it is convenient to summarise them in order of date.

On the 19th February the Allied Naval Attack on the Dardanelles Forts began. It was carried further, as weather and the progress of mine-sweeping permitted, on subsequent dates, and was supplemented by landing parties of Marines from the ships. It culminated on the 18th March in the unsuccessful attack on the Narrows, in which the battleships " Ocean " and " Irresistible " were lost by mines, with one French battleship, and " Inflexible " and two French battleships damaged. The loss of life was not considerable.

From the 5th to the 9th March the Port of Smyrna was bombarded.

On the 25th April the second attack on the Dardanelles began. Troops were landed at six points, in circumstances of danger and difficulty which spared neither Navy nor Army; and of the units engaged the Officers and Men of the steamship " River Clyde," and those whom they landed under Sedd-el-Bahr, earned, perhaps, the most enduring fame.

On the 13th May the battleship " Goliath " was sunk by a Turkish destroyer in the Dardanelles; of a complement of 750, 502 names are on the three Naval Memorials and of these 43 are in this Portsmouth Register.

On the 25th May the battleship " Triumph " was sunk by a submarine off Gaba Tepe, Gallipoli, with the loss of 3 officers and 70 men; and on the 27th the battleship " Majestic " was sunk by a submarine off Cape Helles, with few casualties.

On the 2nd June the British Government announced a blockade of the coast of Asia Minor from the Dardanelles to Samos.

On the 1st August British submarines raided the harbour of Constantinople; and on the 8th the Turkish battleship " Barbarousse-Hairedine " was sunk by " E11 " in the Dardanelles.

Between the 6th and the 15th August the landing of troops at Suvla Bay was carried out.

The evacuation of the Suvla and Anzac areas of the Gallipoli Peninsula was effected, almost without loss or damage, on the 19th and 20th December.

The Register of the Portsmouth Memorial (1915) records particulars of the loss of 972 ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy, 536 of whom fell in H.M.S. " Viknor," " Bayano," " Goliath," " Princess Irene," " Lynx " and " Natal," and of 4 Civilians employed by the Admiralty.

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART THREE. 1916.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1916, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the Great War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1916, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The important features of the year 1916, from the point of view of Naval history, are the British blockade of Germany; the German extended submarine campaign, with its result of increasing friction with the neutral Powers; the activity of isolated German raiders; and the Battle of Jutland. It will be convenient to deal first with the minor incidents of the year; then with the British blockade and the activities of German submarines and surface commerce raiders; and lastly with the only considerable action fought by the German Fleet.

On the 6th January the battleship "King Edward VII" was sunk by a mine off the North of Scotland. The whole of the crew was saved by destroyers.

The evacuation of the Gallipoli Peninsula was completed, with one accidental casualty, between the 7th and the morning of the 9th January.

On the 9th February the German gunboat "Hedwig von Wissmann" was sunk on Lake Tanganyika by H.M.S. "Mimi" and "Fifi" ("Kingani" renamed); and the British command of the lake was secured shortly afterwards by the scuttling of the "Graf von Götzen."

On the 11th February the light cruiser "Arethusa" was sunk by mine in the North Sea, with the loss of twelve lives.

On the 29th February the armed merchant cruisers "Alcantara" and "Greif" met and fought East of the Shetlands. Both were sunk, but the whole of the British crew and two-thirds of the German were saved.

On the 29th, also, the British blockade of the Cameroons (which had been cleared by the Allied forces during the month) was raised.

On the 25th March an unsuccessful raid, supported by the Harwich Force and the Battle Cruiser Fleet, was made with seaplanes on the German Zeppelin base in Schleswig.

On the 25th April Lowestoft and Yarmouth were bombarded by a German battle cruiser squadron. Two hundred houses were wrecked in Lowestoft, but with small loss of life; and Yarmouth was barely damaged. British light cruisers and destroyers engaged the enemy, and the light cruiser "Conquest" was hit. Later in the year Seaham was shelled by a submarine (11th July).

The battleship "Russell" was sunk by a mine off Malta on the 27th April. Of the ranks and ratings who perished in this disaster, the names of 13 appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 5th June the cruiser "Hampshire" was sunk by a mine off the Orkneys. The names of 601 ranks and ratings from this vessel, 518 of whom belonged to the Port of Portsmouth, appear on the Naval Memorials; and the names of Lord Kitchener and his staff, who were on their way to Russia, will appear on another Memorial.

A "pacific blockade" of Greece was begun by the Allied Powers on the 6th June, and suspended on the 22nd. The intention was to compel the Greek Government to observe an impartial neutrality. It was carried further by the seizure, on the 2nd September, of the German ships in the Piræus harbour; by the blockade of Greek Macedonia begun on the 19th September; by the demand, presented on the 10th October, for the surrender of the Greek Fleet; and by the measures taken in November and December which culminated, six months later, in the abdication of King Constantine and the accession of Greece to the Allied Powers.

The naval and military operations against the coast of German East Africa were marked by the occupation of Tanga on the 7th July; the capture of Bagamoyo by landing parties on the 15th August; the surrender of Dar-es-Salaam on the 4th September; and the occupation of Kilwa on the 7th and Lindi on the 16th September.

On the 19th August the light cruisers "Falmouth" and "Nottingham" were sunk by a submarine in the North Sea during a sortie of the High Seas Fleet. The names of 48 ranks and ratings appear on the three Naval Memorials as killed or drowned in this disaster.

On the 26th October the destroyer "Flirt" and one trawler and six drifters were sunk by German destroyers in the Straits of Dover. The names of 104 ranks and ratings who fell in this action appear on the three Naval Memorials.

Three hospital ships were lost in the autumn, with considerable loss of life; "Galeka" by mine off Le Havre on the 28th October; "Britannic" by mine in the Ægean on the 21st November; and "Braemar Castle," probably by mine, in the Ægean on the 23rd November.

As a reprisal against the German submarine campaign, an Order in Council had been issued in March, 1915, empowering British cruisers to bring in, for adjudication, all cargoes with an enemy origin or destination. This Order was supplemented by others, and in July, 1916, the Declaration of London was formally repealed. A Ministry of Blockade was created in January, 1916, and by its agency special agreements were concluded with neutral Powers in order to make the economic isolation of Germany and her allies as complete as possible. It is probable that the pressure on the German population resulted directly in the emergence of the German High Seas Fleet at the Battle of Jutland, and indirectly in the increased activity of German submarines and surface commerce raiders.

From the outbreak of war to the end of 1915, 342 British merchant vessels were captured or destroyed by the enemy. In 1916, 396 were captured or destroyed. They were lost either to submarines or to such other raiders as the converted merchantmen " Moewe " (which made two cruises this year), and " Seeadler " and " Wolff," which left Germany towards the end of the year. The German Government found great difficulty in reconciling the effective use of their submarine arm with the maintenance of friendly relations with neutral Powers. Their claim to treat all defensively armed merchantmen as belligerents was announced to the Government of the United States in February. It led to the torpedoing of the cross-Channel passenger steamer " Sussex " by " UB29 " on the 24th March, which was followed by a very strongly worded note from the United States Government; and in May the unrestricted submarine campaign was formally abandoned. But the submarines continued throughout the year the operations which were to become critical in 1917, and among their victims was the White Star liner " Cymric," torpedoed on the 8th May in the Atlantic.

To organise the use of the merchant fleet by allotting its vessels to definite routes and purposes, and to hold the balance between civil and military, British and Allied needs, the Shipping Control Committee was formed in January, 1916. In December a Shipping Controller was appointed; but the Ministry of Shipping was not created until the following year.

Very early on the 31st May the High Seas Fleet came out to raid commerce in the Skagerrak, and about the same time the Grand Fleet, warned of the movements in the German rivers and the Bight, was concentrating on the Eastern side of the North Sea.

Admiral Beatty, with four battleships, six battle cruisers, and 29 destroyers, came first into contact with the enemy's scouting groups (five battle cruisers, five light cruisers, and 23 destroyers), and endeavoured to cut off their retreat on the Heligoland Bight. After an hour's fighting, the main German fleet came up; and Admiral Beatty retired on the Battle Fleet, pursued by the Germans.

The main action lasted from about 5.15 p.m. to the fall of darkness about 9.15, and it resolved itself into an attempt to force the enemy to close action in spite of his elusive tactics. Even in the darkness fighting went on between the destroyers of the Fourth Flotilla and the escaping German ships. In the morning of the 1st June the Twelfth Flotilla was engaged; but by 3.30 a.m. the High Seas Fleet had reached Horn Reefs, and by 6.30 it was out of danger.

The German Fleet lost in the Battle of Jutland one battleship, one battle cruiser, four light cruisers, and five destroyers. The losses of the British Fleet, and the number of names appearing on each of the Naval Memorials, are as follows :—

	Chatham.	Plymouth.	Portsmouth.

The Register of the Portsmouth Memorial (1916), which is divided alphabetically into three parts, records particulars of the loss of 4,485 ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy, 567 of whom fell in H.M.S. " Black Prince ", " Defence ", " Indefatigable ", " Invincible ", " Queen Mary ", " Tipperary ", and " Hampshire ", and 8 civilians employed by the Admiralty.

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART FOUR. 1916.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1916, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the Great War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1916, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The important features of the year 1916, from the point of view of Naval history, are the British blockade of Germany; the German extended submarine campaign, with its result of increasing friction with the neutral Powers; the activity of isolated German raiders; and the Battle of Jutland. It will be convenient to deal first with the minor incidents of the year; then with the British blockade and the activities of German submarines and surface commerce raiders; and lastly with the only considerable action fought by the German Fleet.

1. Naval engagements and incidents (excluding the Battle of Jutland).

On the 6th January the battleship "King Edward VII" was sunk by a mine off the North of Scotland. The whole of the crew was saved by destroyers.

The evacuation of the Gallipoli Peninsula was completed, with one accidental casualty, between the 7th and the morning of the 9th January.

On the 9th February the German gunboat "Hedwig von Wissmann" was sunk on Lake Tanganyika by H.M.S. "Mimi" and "Fifi" ("Kingani" renamed); and the British command of the lake was secured shortly afterwards by the scuttling of the "Graf von Götzen."

On the 11th February the light cruiser "Arethusa" was sunk by mine in the North Sea, with the loss of twelve lives.

On the 29th February the armed merchant cruisers "Alcantara" and "Greif" met and fought East of the Shetlands. Both were sunk, but the whole of the British crew and two-thirds of the German were saved.

On the 29th, also, the British blockade of the Cameroons (which had been cleared by the Allied forces during the month) was raised.

On the 25th March an unsuccessful raid, supported by the Harwich Force and the Battle Cruiser Fleet, was made with seaplanes on the German Zeppelin base in Schleswig.

On the 25th April Lowestoft and Yarmouth were bombarded by a German battle cruiser squadron. Two hundred houses were wrecked in Lowestoft, but with small loss of life; and Yarmouth was barely damaged. British light cruisers and destroyers engaged the enemy, and the light cruiser "Conquest" was hit. Later in the year Seaham was shelled by a submarine (11th July).

The battleship "Russell" was sunk by a mine off Malta on the 27th April. Of the ranks and ratings who perished in this disaster, the names of 13 appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 5th June the cruiser "Hampshire" was sunk by a mine off the Orkneys. The names of 601 ranks and ratings from this vessel, 518 of whom belonged to the Port of Portsmouth, appear on the Naval Memorials; and the names of Lord Kitchener and his staff, who were on their way to Russia, will appear on another Memorial.

A "pacific blockade" of Greece was begun by the Allied Powers on the 6th June, and suspended on the 22nd. The intention was to compel the Greek Government to observe an impartial neutrality. It was carried further by the seizure, on the 2nd September, of the German ships in the Piræus harbour; by the blockade of Greek Macedonia begun on the 19th September; by the demand, presented on the 10th October, for the surrender of the Greek Fleet; and by the measures taken in November and December which culminated, six months later, in the abdication of King Constantine and the accession of Greece to the Allied Powers.

The naval and military operations against the coast of German East Africa were marked by the occupation of Tanga on the 7th July; the capture of Bagamoyo by landing parties on the 15th August; the surrender of Dar-es-Salaam on the 4th September; and the occupation of Kilwa on the 7th and Lindi on the 16th September.

On the 19th August the light cruisers "Falmouth" and "Nottingham" were sunk by a submarine in the North Sea during a sortie of the High Seas Fleet. The names of 48 ranks and ratings appear on the three Naval Memorials as killed or drowned in this disaster.

On the 26th October the destroyer "Flirt" and one trawler and six drifters were sunk by German destroyers in the Straits of Dover. The names of 104 ranks and ratings who fell in this action appear on the three Naval Memorials.

Three hospital ships were lost in the autumn, with considerable loss of life; "Galeka" by mine off Le Havre on the 28th October; "Britannic" by mine in the Ægean on the 21st November; and "Braemar Castle," probably by mine, in the Ægean on the 23rd November.

As a reprisal against the German submarine campaign, an Order in Council had been issued in March, 1915, empowering British cruisers to bring in, for adjudication, all cargoes with an enemy origin or destination. This Order was supplemented by others, and in July, 1916, the Declaration of London was formally repealed. A Ministry of Blockade was created in January, 1916, and by its agency special agreements were concluded with neutral Powers in order to make the economic isolation of Germany and her allies as complete as possible. It is probable that the pressure on the German population resulted directly in the emergence of the German High Seas Fleet at the Battle of Jutland, and indirectly in the increased activity of German submarines and surface commerce raiders.

From the outbreak of war to the end of 1915, 342 British merchant vessels were captured or destroyed by the enemy. In 1916, 396 were captured or destroyed. They were lost either to submarines or to such other raiders as the converted merchantmen "Moewe" (which made two cruises this year), and "Seeadler" and "Wolff," which left Germany towards the end of the year. The German Government found great difficulty in reconciling the effective use of their submarine arm with the maintenance of friendly relations with neutral Powers. Their claim to treat all defensively armed merchantmen as belligerents was announced to the Government of the United States in February. It led to the torpedoing of the cross-Channel passenger steamer "Sussex" by "UB29" on the 24th March, which was followed by a very strongly worded note from the United States Government; and in May the unrestricted submarine campaign was formally abandoned. But the submarines continued throughout the year the operations which were to become critical in 1917, and among their victims was the White Star liner "Cymric," torpedoed on the 8th May in the Atlantic.

To organise the use of the merchant fleet by allotting its vessels to definite routes and purposes, and to hold the balance between civil and military, British and Allied needs, the Shipping Control Committee was formed in January, 1916. In December a Shipping Controller was appointed; but the Ministry of Shipping was not created until the following year.

Very early on the 31st May the High Seas Fleet came out to raid commerce in the Skagerrak, and about the same time the Grand Fleet, warned of the movements in the German rivers and the Bight, was concentrating on the Eastern side of the North Sea.

Admiral Beatty, with four battleships, six battle cruisers, and 29 destroyers, came first into contact with the enemy's scouting groups (five battle cruisers, five light cruisers, and 23 destroyers), and endeavoured to cut off their retreat on the Heligoland Bight. After an hour's fighting, the main German fleet came up; and Admiral Beatty retired on the Battle Fleet, pursued by the Germans.

The main action lasted from about 5.15 p.m. to the fall of darkness about 9.15, and it resolved itself into an attempt to force the enemy to close action in spite of his elusive tactics. Even in the darkness fighting went on between the destroyers of the Fourth Flotilla and the escaping German ships. In the morning of the 1st June the Twelfth Flotilla was engaged; but by 3.30 a.m. the High Seas Fleet had reached Horn Reefs, and by 6.30 it was out of danger.

The German Fleet lost in the Battle of Jutland one battleship, one battle cruiser, four light cruisers, and five destroyers. The losses of the British Fleet, and the number of names appearing on each of the Naval Memorials, are as follows :—

Battle Cruisers.	Chatham.	Plymouth.	Portsmouth.
"Indefatigable"	85	790	141
"Invincible"	68	71	880
"Queen Mary"	101	83	1,082

"Turbulent"	74	4	6
And from other vessels not sunk the numbers are	54	94	163

The Register of the Portsmouth Memorial (1916), which is divided alphabetically into three parts, records particulars of the loss of 4,485 ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy, 567 of whom fell in H.M.S. "Black Prince", "Defence", "Indefatigable", "Invincible", "Queen Mary", "Tipperary", and "Hampshire", and 8 civilians employed by the Admiralty.

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART FIVE. 1916.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1916, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the Great War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1916, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The important features of the year 1916, from the point of view of Naval history, are the British blockade of Germany; the German extended submarine campaign, with its result of increasing friction with the neutral Powers; the activity of isolated German raiders; and the Battle of Jutland. It will be convenient to deal first with the minor incidents of the year; then with the British blockade and the activities of German submarines and surface commerce raiders; and lastly with the only considerable action fought by the German Fleet.

On the 6th January the battleship "King Edward VII" was sunk by a mine off the North of Scotland. The whole of the crew was saved by destroyers.

The evacuation of the Gallipoli Peninsula was completed, with one accidental casualty, between the 7th and the morning of the 9th January.

On the 9th February the German gunboat "Hedwig von Wissmann" was sunk on Lake Tanganyika by H.M.S. "Mimi" and "Fifi" ("Kingani" renamed); and the British command of the lake was secured shortly afterwards by the scuttling of the "Graf von Götzen."

On the 11th February the light cruiser "Arethusa" was sunk by mine in the North Sea, with the loss of twelve lives.

On the 29th February the armed merchant cruisers "Alcantara" and "Greif" met and fought East of the Shetlands. Both were sunk, but the whole of the British crew and two-thirds of the German were saved.

On the 29th, also, the British blockade of the Cameroons (which had been cleared by the Allied forces during the month) was raised.

On the 25th March an unsuccessful raid, supported by the Harwich Force and the Battle Cruiser Fleet, was made with seaplanes on the German Zeppelin base in Schleswig.

On the 25th April Lowestoft and Yarmouth were bombarded by a German battle cruiser squadron. Two hundred houses were wrecked in Lowestoft, but with small loss of life; and Yarmouth was barely damaged. British light cruisers and destroyers engaged the enemy, and the light cruiser "Conquest" was hit. Later in the year Seaham was shelled by a submarine (11th July).

The battleship "Russell" was sunk by a mine off Malta on the 27th April. Of the ranks and ratings who perished in this disaster, the names of 13 appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

On the 5th June the cruiser "Hampshire" was sunk by a mine off the Orkneys. The names of 601 ranks and ratings from this vessel, 518 of whom belonged to the Port of Portsmouth, appear on the Naval Memorials; and the names of Lord Kitchener and his staff, who were on their way to Russia, will appear on another Memorial.

A "pacific blockade" of Greece was begun by the Allied Powers on the 6th June, and suspended on the 22nd. The intention was to compel the Greek Government to observe an impartial neutrality. It was carried further by the seizure, on the 2nd September, of the German ships in the Piræus harbour; by the blockade of Greek Macedonia begun on the 19th September; by the demand, presented on the 10th October, for the surrender of the Greek Fleet; and by the measures taken in November and December which culminated, six months later, in the abdication of King Constantine and the accession of Greece to the Allied Powers.

The naval and military operations against the coast of German East Africa were marked by the occupation of Tanga on the 7th July; the capture of Bagamoyo by landing parties on the 15th August; the surrender of Dar-es-Salaam on the 4th September; and the occupation of Kilwa on the 7th and Lindi on the 16th September.

On the 19th August the light cruisers "Falmouth" and "Nottingham" were sunk by a submarine in the North Sea during a sortie of the High Seas Fleet. The names of 48 ranks and ratings appear on the three Naval Memorials as killed or drowned in this disaster.

On the 26th October the destroyer "Flirt" and one trawler and six drifters were sunk by German destroyers in the Straits of Dover. The names of 104 ranks and ratings who fell in this action appear on the three Naval Memorials.

Three hospital ships were lost in the autumn, with considerable loss of life; "Galeka" by mine off Le Havre on the 28th October; "Britannic" by mine in the Ægean on the 21st November; and "Braemar Castle," probably by mine, in the Ægean on the 23rd November.

As a reprisal against the German submarine campaign, an Order in Council had been issued in March, 1915, empowering British cruisers to bring in, for adjudication, all cargoes with an enemy origin or destination. This Order was supplemented by others, and in July, 1916, the Declaration of London was formally repealed. A Ministry of Blockade was created in January, 1916, and by its agency special agreements were concluded with neutral Powers in order to make the economic isolation of Germany and her allies as complete as possible. It is probable that the pressure on the German population resulted directly in the emergence of the German High Seas Fleet at the Battle of Jutland, and indirectly in the increased activity of German submarines and surface commerce raiders.

From the outbreak of war to the end of 1915, 342 British merchant vessels were captured or destroyed by the enemy. In 1916, 396 were captured or destroyed. They were lost either to submarines or to such other raiders as the converted merchantmen "Moewe" (which made two cruises this year), and "Seeadler" and "Wolff," which left Germany towards the end of the year. The German Government found great difficulty in reconciling the effective use of their submarine arm with the maintenance of friendly relations with neutral Powers. Their claim to treat all defensively armed merchantmen as belligerents was announced to the Government of the United States in February. It led to the torpedoing of the cross-Channel passenger steamer "Sussex" by "UB29" on the 24th March, which was followed by a very strongly worded note from the United States Government; and in May the unrestricted submarine campaign was formally abandoned. But the submarines continued throughout the year the operations which were to become critical in 1917, and among their victims was the White Star liner "Cymric," torpedoed on the 8th May in the Atlantic.

To organise the use of the merchant fleet by allotting its vessels to definite routes and purposes, and to hold the balance between civil and military, British and Allied needs, the Shipping Control Committee was formed in January, 1916. In December a Shipping Controller was appointed; but the Ministry of Shipping was not created until the following year.

Very early on the 31st May the High Seas Fleet came out to raid commerce in the Skagerrak, and about the same time the Grand Fleet, warned of the movements in the German rivers and the Bight, was concentrating on the Eastern side of the North Sea.

Admiral Beatty, with four battleships, six battle cruisers, and 29 destroyers, came first into contact with the enemy's scouting groups (five battle cruisers, five light cruisers, and 23 destroyers), and endeavoured to cut off their retreat on the Heligoland Bight. After an hour's fighting, the main German fleet came up; and Admiral Beatty retired on the Battle Fleet, pursued by the Germans.

The main action lasted from about 5.15 p.m. to the fall of darkness about 9.15, and it resolved itself into an attempt to force the enemy to close action in spite of his elusive tactics. Even in the darkness fighting went on between the destroyers of the Fourth Flotilla and the escaping German ships. In the morning of the 1st June the Twelfth Flotilla was engaged; but by 3.30 a.m. the High Seas Fleet had reached Horn Reefs, and by 6.30 it was out of danger.

The German Fleet lost in the Battle of Jutland one battleship, one battle cruiser, four light cruisers, and five destroyers. The losses of the British Fleet, and the number of names appearing on each of the Naval Memorials, are as follows :—

	Chatham.	Plymouth.	Portsmouth.

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

MEMORIAL AT THE PORT OF PORTSMOUTH

INDEX NUMBER M.R. 3. PART SIX. 1917.

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1917, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the year 1917, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The main interest of the Naval warfare of 1917 lies in the continued British blockade of Germany and the intensified use of the German submarines in an attempted counter-blockade. The Naval actions of the year are relatively few and unimportant. It will be convenient to deal first with the two blockades, and their administrative and diplomatic consequences, and then with the events unrelated, or only indirectly related, to the more important subject.

The Allied Navies had established the command of the outer seas in four months from the outbreak of war, and every possible step had since then been taken to prevent the importation of food or raw material by the Central Powers. The result was a growing scarcity in both respects which fell with particular weight upon the German Empire, and against which Germany was better able than her allies to react. The use of submarines against Allied and neutral merchant shipping had been developed as the war continued: in 1914-15, 230 British merchantmen had been sunk by submarines, and in 1916, 288. In 1917 the conflict of the submarine and the merchantman was to become the centre of public interest in the war at sea.

In January, 1917, the Ministry of Shipping was formed. Its duty was defined as "to ensure that all British shipping was used to the best advantage of the nation." It absorbed all committees then dealing with the subject and started a programme of construction of standardised cargo ships.

In the same month the Inter-Allied Chartering Committee was established, and an Order in Council was issued forbidding the chartering of neutral vessels without permission. The effect of these measures, and of the steps taken to enforce them, was practically to give the British Government the control of all neutral shipping.

At the end of January the German Government announced the immediate adoption of "unrestricted submarine warfare", and withdrew the promise made in 1916 that no merchantman, even if defensively armed, should be sunk by a submarine without warning, or without due regard to the safety of passengers and crew. The Norwegian Government, on the 1st February, forbade foreign submarines to use Norwegian territorial waters; the United States, on the 3rd February, severed diplomatic relations with Germany; and, on the 13th February,

In January 49 British merchantmen were sunk. In February the total rose to 105, in March to 127, and in April to 169; and on the average more than four-fifths of these losses were due to submarines. In May experiments were made in convoying merchant vessels in the Atlantic with warships. In June the Admiralty approved a scheme for ocean convoys, and at the beginning of July the system began to be regularly used. It had been applied to the French coal trade since February, and to communication with Scandinavia since March. The losses of merchant shipping fell month by month almost continuously, though in October and December two convoys were destroyed by German squadrons.

Meanwhile the Government of the United States had proceeded to hostilities. In March they announced the arming of all their merchant vessels in the war zone, and on the 6th April they declared war on Germany. Their destroyers arrived at Queenstown on the 2nd May, and their first troops in France on the 25th June. The submarine attacks on their transports were unsuccessful. The result of the unrestricted submarine campaign was thus a great, but not an increasing, strain on the merchant shipping controlled by the Allies, and a decisive accession of strength to the Allied military forces. The defection of Russia, which became definite in December, 1917, was more than balanced.

On the 9th January the battleship "Cornwallis" was sunk by a submarine off Malta. The names of 12 dead from this disaster appear on the Naval Memorials.

On the 23rd January the Harwich Force engaged the German 6th Torpedo Boat Flotilla. The destroyer "Simoom" was sunk, with the loss of 45 ranks and ratings who are named on the Naval Memorials.

On the 25th January the armed merchant cruiser "Laurentic" was sunk, probably by mine, off the North Irish Coast. The names of 261 ranks and ratings from this vessel appear on the Naval Memorials, and of these 26 are commemorated at Portsmouth. On the same day German destroyers raided Southwold and Wangford, on the Suffolk coast; and on the 25th February they attacked Margate and Broadstairs.

The German Government had announced, at the end of February, that they would sink British Hospital Ships, on the ground (which was at once denied by the British Government) that these vessels were used for military purposes. The intervention of the Spanish Government brought about the withdrawal of the threat. In the meantime, however, "Asturias" had been torpedoed off Start Point on the night of the 20th–21st March, and "Gloucester Castle" in the Channel on the 30th March; the ambulance transports "Lanfranc" and "Donegal" had been torpedoed in the Channel on the 17th April; and "Dover Castle" had been sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean on the 26th May. Another Hospital Ship, "Salta", was sunk by a mine off Le Havre on the 10th April. The loss of life in some cases was considerable.

The German raider " Leopard " was sunk by H.M.S. " Achilles " in the North Sea on the 16th March. The raider " Moewe " returned to Kiel on the 22nd from a cruise of three months, in which she had destroyed about 100,000 tons of British merchant shipping.

On the 18th March the destroyer " Paragon " was sunk in a raid of German destroyers on Ramsgate and Broadstairs. The names of 63 ranks and ratings from this vessel appear on the Portsmouth Memorial, and those of six on the other two Memorials.

On the 15th April the transport " Arcadian," on the 25th April the transport " Ballarat," and on the 4th May the transport " Transylvania " were torpedoed. In the second case, no lives were lost.

On the 20th April six German destroyers raided the Dover Straits, but failed to cause serious military or civil damage. They were encountered by two flotilla leaders of the Dover Patrol, " Swift " and " Broke ", and two of them were sunk. Ramsgate was attacked by destroyers on the night of the 26th–27th April, but little damage was done.

On the 15th May Austrian forces raided the British drifter fleet in the Straits of Otranto, and 14 British drifters were sunk. An action followed between the Allied and Austrian forces, in which the light cruisers " Dartmouth " and " Bristol " were engaged ; and the enemy were pursued back to Cattaro. The loss of life in this action was small.

On the 7th July the destroyer " Ettrick " was torpedoed in the Channel, and 48 names from this vessel appear on the Memorials.

On the 9th July the battleship " Vanguard " was sunk as the result of an internal explosion in harbour at Scapa Flow. This Portsmouth Register contains the names of 126 ranks and ratings who perished, and the names of 697 others are recorded at Chatham or Plymouth.

The cruiser " Drake " was sunk by submarine in the North Channel on the 2nd October. The names of 18 ranks and ratings who fell in this disaster appear on the Naval Memorials.

On the 17th October German cruisers raided a British convoy in the North Sea and sank two destroyers, " Strongbow " and " Mary Rose ", and nine neutral merchantmen. This Portsmouth Register records the names of 10 ranks and ratings from the destroyers, and the names of 112 others appear on the other two Memorials.

On the 2nd November British light forces carried out a raid in the Kattegat.

On the 11th November the destroyer " Staunch " and the monitor " M15 " were sunk by submarine off the coast of Palestine. The names of 31 ranks and ratings from the two vessels appear on the Naval Memorials.

A Light Cruiser action off Heligoland was fought on the 17th November. No British ships were lost ; but the names of 21 ranks and ratings, killed on board H.M.S. " Caledon ", " Calypso ", and " Cardiff ", appear on the Naval Memorials.

On the 6th December a Battleship Division of the United States Navy joined the Grand Fleet.

On the 12th December four German destroyers attacked and sank a British convoy (five neutral vessels and one British) in the North Sea. Of the escort, four trawlers and the destroyer "Partridge" were sunk, and only the destroyer "Pellew" escaped. The Registers record 66 names from H.M.S. "Partridge", 54 of which appear on the Portsmouth Memorial.

The following are particulars of commissioned ships not already mentioned, which were lost during the year and which were important either in themselves or because of the number of their dead who are named in the Naval Memorial Registers of 1917 :—

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

MEMORIAL AT THE PORT OF PORTSMOUTH

THIS Register records the names of those Officers and Men of the Navies of the Empire who fell in 1918–1921, who have no other grave than the Sea, and who are commemorated on the Memorial on the edge of Southsea Common. The names of those who fell in the other years of the War are recorded in other Registers, and the origin and design of the Naval Memorials will be described in a separate book; but the following summary of the Naval actions of the years 1918–1921, particularly as they affected the Port of Portsmouth, is material to this Register.

The year 1918 was a year, so far as the British land forces are concerned, of desperate resistance followed quickly by overwhelming victory; but for the Navies it was less eventful. The German fleet, except for its destroyers and smaller vessels, had sailed for the last time on a hostile errand. The submarines had been met by the convoys, and British and neutral merchantmen faced a gradually lessening risk. The year was full of incident, but free from crisis, until the days when one after the other the navies of the Central Powers gave up the fight.

The monthly figures of British merchant shipping losses from all causes had fallen from their highest point (169 ships) in April 1917 to 85 ships in December. The total number of British merchant vessels lost in 1917 was 1,200; and more than three quarters of these were sunk by submarines. The total for 1918, to the date of the Armistice with Germany, was 544 ships (or nearly two million tons); the highest figure for any month was 82, in March, and the figures fell to 51 in June and below 50 for each of the following months.

The last two British vessels to be sunk by submarines were torpedoed near Port Said on the 2nd November.

It will be convenient to summarise first the diplomatic and administrative measures of the year; then the actions and incidents of British naval warfare; and lastly the losses of commissioned ships, not otherwise mentioned, which were important in themselves or by reason of the number of the dead.

1. Diplomatic and Administrative Measures.

On the 4th January the Allies requested the Dutch Government to surrender the Dutch ships then in American and Allied ports. The request was the subject of negotiation until the 21st March, when the vessels were requisitioned by the Associated Governments.

In February the Allied Maritime Transport Council was formed, and the Council held its first meeting in March. Its object was to extend formally to all Allied shipping the measure of control already established over the British merchant fleet.

In March the Allied Blockade Committee was formed.

In May, June and August Allied forces were landed in North Russia for several reasons, one of which was the necessity of denying to the enemy the use of Murmansk and Archangel as submarine bases.

On the 30th September the Armistice with Bulgaria was signed.

On the 31st October the Armistice with Turkey was signed; and on the 12th and 13th November the Allied Fleet passed the Dardanelles and arrived at Constantinople.

The Austrian Emperor handed over the Austro-Hungarian Fleet to the Yugo-Slav National Council on the 31st October, and the Armistice with Austria-Hungary was signed on the 4th November.

The Armistice with Germany was signed, and the main task of the British and Dominion Naval forces completed, on the 11th November. The first contingent of German submarines surrendered at Harwich on the 20th November; and on the following day the High Seas Fleet arrived at Rosyth on its way to internment at Scapa Flow, where the battleships and cruisers were scuttled by their own crews on the 21st June, 1919.

On the 26th November the Allied Fleet from Constantinople arrived at Sevastopol and took over the Russian Black Sea Fleet, which had been held by the Germans since May.

Hostilities with the Bolshevik Fleets and Armies continued during the greater part of 1919.

On the 14th January Yarmouth was raided by German destroyers.

On the 20th January the German battle-cruiser "Goeben" and cruiser "Breslau" (which had entered the Dardanelles in August, 1914, and operated in the Black Sea against Russia) made a sortie. They sank two British monitors, "Raglan" and "M28", at Imbros, and returned to the Dardanelles, where "Breslau" was sunk by a mine and "Goeben" was damaged, but refloated. The Naval Memorials record the names of 100 ranks and ratings from the monitors, of whom 12 are commemorated at Portsmouth.

The Turkish flotilla on the Dead Sea was captured by Arab camelry on the 27th January.

The steamship "Tuscania", carrying United States troops, was sunk by submarine off the Irish coast, on the 5th February, with the loss of about 200 lives.

On the night of the 15th–16th February the third German destroyer raid on the Dover Straits took place. Seven British drifters were sunk; and of 54 names from these vessels appearing on the Naval Memorials, 14 are commemorated at Portsmouth. Dover was shelled by a German submarine on the following day.

In the early morning of the 21st March several German destroyers, returning to their base after raiding the Dover Straits, were attacked by the British destroyers " Botha " and " Morris " and three French destroyers, and three of the German vessels were sunk. This was the last of the series of raids on the Dover Straits.

In April, German forces invaded Finland and captured Helsingfors; and seven British submarines in the harbour were destroyed to avoid capture.

On the 15th April, in the course of a mine-laying operation, a light cruiser sweep was carried out in the Kattegat. Ten German trawlers were sunk by gunfire by destroyers, after their crews had been taken off. There were no casualties.

On the night of the 22nd–23rd April the Dover Patrol carried out a raid on Ostend and Zeebrugge, designed to block, and as much as possible to damage, those two ports, which were the outlets for the German torpedo-boats and submarines based on Bruges. At Ostend, the light cruisers " Brilliant " and " Sirius " were sunk, but several hundred yards from the harbour mouth. At Zeebrugge, the light cruisers " Thetis ", " Intrepid " and " Iphigenia " were sunk across the channel; the ship-canal was blocked; the landing parties stormed and damaged the German works on the Mole, and the survivors were taken off by the light cruiser " Vindictive ". The viaduct connecting the Mole with the shore was blown up. The crews of the five blockships were saved by motor-launches. About 200 officers and men fell in the two enterprises, and the destroyer " North Star " was sunk in action. Five names on the Portsmouth Memorial are associated with the actions of St. George's Day, 1918.

On the early morning of the 10th May the attack on Ostend harbour was renewed; and " Vindictive " was sunk in the channel, but without completely blocking it. The crew were rescued, and only 19 officers and men fell.

On the 10th October the Irish mail boat " Leinster " was torpedoed and sunk. About 450 lives were lost out of 700 on the boat; but only ten belonged to the Royal Navy.

By the 20th October the Allied Armies had seized the whole of the Belgian coast-line.

On the 9th November, two days before the Armistice with Germany, the battleship " Britannia " was sunk by a submarine off Cape Trafalgar, with small loss of life; 27 names from the ship appear on the Naval Memorials.

On the 8th December a naval action was fought with the Russian Bolshevik Fleet in the Caspian Sea.

On the 18th August, 1919, three coastal motor boats were lost in an attack on the Russian Fleet in Kronstadt Harbour, and two Russian battleships and a Russian destroyer were sunk. From this, the last Naval action of the Great War, seven names appear on the Naval Memorials.

The Register of the Portsmouth Memorial (1918–21) records particulars of the loss of 1,086 ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy, 249 of whom fell in H.M.S. " Narbrough ", " Opal ", " Louvain " and " Glatton ", and of four civilians employed by the Admiralty.

THE LAND ON WHICH THE MEMORIAL STANDS IS HELD BY THE IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION, UNDER A LEASE GRANTED BY HIS MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR FOR A TERM OF 999 YEARS FROM THE 31st DAY OF DECEMBER, 1920 AT A PEPPERCORN RENT.

The particulars given in the Register of the names have been compiled from information furnished by the Admiralty and the next-of-kin. In all cases the relatives have been asked to furnish the personal information they wish to appear in the Register and where possible this has been given in their actual words.

The names on the Memorial are arranged alphabetically by ranks and ratings under the year of death, on a series of bronze panels, which are numbered. The number which concludes each entry in the Register is that of the panel on which the name appears.

WHITE, Lieut. Comdr. Geoffrey Sexton, V.C. R.N. H.M. S/M. "E14." Killed in action in Dardanelles 28th Jan., 1918. An extract from the "London Gazette," No. 31354, dated 24th May, 1919, records the following:—"For most conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Commanding Officer of H.M. Submarine "E14" on the 28th of January, 1918. "E14" left Mudros on the 27th of January, under instructions to force the Narrows and attack the "Goeben," which was reported aground off Nagara Point after being damaged during her sortie from the Dardanelles. The latter vessel was not found and "E14" turned back. At about 8.45 a.m. on the 28th of January a torpedo was fired from "E14" at an enemy ship; 11 seconds after the torpedo left the tube a heavy explosion took place, caused all the lights to go out, and sprang the fore hatch. Leaking badly the boat was blown to 15 feet, and at once a heavy fire came from the forts, but the hull was not hit. "E14" then dived and proceeded on her way out. Soon afterwards the boat became out of control and as the air supply was nearly exhausted, Lieutenant-Commander White decided to run the risk of proceeding on the surface. Heavy fire was immediately opened from both sides, and, after running the gauntlet for half-an-hour, being steered from below, "E14" was so badly damaged that Lieutenant-Commander White turned towards the shore in order to give the crew a chance of being saved. He remained on deck the whole time himself until he was killed by a shell." 28.
